SUBJECT: Chronology of the Cuban Crisis: (U)

TO: Hq USAF (AFCHO)
Wash. 25, D. C.

Summary, for the period 1 April - 13 October 1962:

During this period, PACAF maintained surveillance of the emerging tension relative to Cuba, principally through intelligence means. These findings were communicated to subordinate commands on a continuing basis. In the reconnaissance field, during August 1962 PACAF was tasked to provide one C-130B with air/support personnel for ARCP support of CONUS operation QUICK FOX. This support was estimated to be for a 90-day (maximum) period. The crew was placed on TDY from the 6091st RS in Japan, and a new aircraft (Strawbridge) was designated for this mission. (In late October, USAF directed that a second aircraft and crew be diverted to support this operation. In late November, PACAF was advised that both aircraft would be transferred to TAC which would assume responsibility of the QUICK FOX mission as soon as aircrew/support training requirements were met.)

COMBAT FORCES:

(~~SECRET~~)--All Quick Strike flyable alert aircraft were uploaded and assumed static alert posture to assure an immediate reaction capability. All PACAF fighter interceptor :

units increased status to four aircraft in five minutes, two on thirty minutes, and all other operationally ready aircraft on one hour alert. Aircrew training was curtailed to the degree necessary to assure a minimum O/R rate of 75 percent of authorized aircraft in consonance with the GWP (message, PACAF to CSAF, TOP SECRET/PFCOI-H 016-62 DTG 052005 Dec 62).

OPERATIONAL PLANNING:

(████████) -- Plans were consummated to deploy PACAF C-130 aircraft in support of Cuban Crisis requirements. PACAF advised CINCPAC that a total of 42 of the 58 C-130s assigned to this command could be deployed without a maintenance stand down. An additional ten could be deployed within 72 hours. Deployment of the remaining six would be subsequent. This planning was based on the following factors:

- (2) Increasing use of Air America from 550 hrs/mo to approximately 1500 hrs/mo;
- (3) Increasing utilization rate for C-124 and other organic airlift (Attachment 6). Details pertinent to this planning were communicated to Fifth Air Force (see 5AF Chronology, this date).

COMBAT FORCES:

(██████████) -Fifth Air Force ordered the move of six F-102 aircraft to Osan immediately. Deployed from Japan (40FIS), the aircraft departed Yokota 24/0318Z October (see 5AF Chronology this date) and arrived in Korea 24/0505Z October. The F-102s immediately assumed the alert posture of two on 5-minute, two on 30-minute and two on one-hour alert (message, PACAF to CSAF, TOP SECRET/PFCOI-H 016-62 DTG 052005 Dec 62).

RECONNAISSANCE AND INTELLIGENCE:

( )--PACAF relayed to Fifth AF a request from TAC for Toy Tiger aircraft (RF-101s). These were made available by Fifth (see 5AF Chronology, this date). PACAF requested 5AF to redeploy these aircraft to Kadena immediately and without necessarily waiting for arrival of replacements (Attachment 9). Three Toy Tiger RF-101 aircraft were deployed to Shaw AFB, with some delay due to maintenance and weather difficulties. (They arrived in CONUS 12/2329Z November 1962). Headquarters, USAF directed that four Toy Tiger aircraft (one at OAMA being repaired) be exchanged for four conventionally configured RF-101s from TAC (message, PACAF to CSAF, TOP SECRET/PFCOI-11 016-62) (DTG 052005Z).

1. PACAF can deploy 42 of the 58 currently possessed
C-130As to COMUS on minimum notice without maintenance stand down. Ten additional C-130s can be deployed within 72 hours. Deployment of the remaining six would be subsequent to this time. Deployment of all PACAF C-130s would have the following impact on specified operations:

b. Quick Strike could be supported by increased utilization of other airlift assets (remaining C-124s, C-54s and Air America).

c. Other current operations could be partially accomplished, with seriously degraded efficiency, by increased utilization of other airlift assets and necessary adjustments to schedules in Alaska to reflect capabilities of aircraft utilized. The Japan/Korea schedules could be maintained by utilizing Air America augmentation.

2. To minimize impact of loss of C-130s the following extraordinary actions will be necessary:

a. Increase C-124 utilization from 2.5 to 3.5 hours/day, and utilize the C-124s on long hauls.

b. Increase J15AB C-54 utilization from 320 hours/month to about 450 hours/month.

c. Increase Air America from 550 hours/month to about 1500 hours. This can be accomplished in about 72 hours, providing necessary funds can be obtained from Hq USAF.

d. Southern Air Transport has been recently increased primarily in SEA activities; some additional slight increase in utilization may be possible.

Copy # 6 of      copies
Incl # ATTACHMENT 6

3. Augmentation of 1503rd ATW by MATS is not considered advisable due to the relatively short period of time PACAF C-130s will be deployed. Moreover, all MATS CONUS resources are likely to be heavily committed to the same operation.

4. a. Cancellation of training missions now programmed by WFO is strongly recommended.

b. While certain aircrew training requirements will be accomplished incident to the deployment, other specialized training requirements will be necessary to be delayed until the return of the aircraft.

c. Comments contained in this message concerning airlift during this period presupposes curtailment of all airlift except high priority projects and missions.

5. Exclusive of training time required to compensate for losses caused by the deployment (noted in para 4d above), recovery to normal operational levels will require approximately 15 days after return of the C-130s to home station. Recovery time includes accomplishment of 15 periodic inspections and clean up of deferred maintenance. Approximately 30% of normal operational capability would be required within 15 days and 70%

within 27 days. Limiting factors for recovery are maintenance docks and support equipment. Recovery presupposes special maintenance assistance from COMUS. Of course, all airlift augmentation should be retained until normal operational capability is regained by the C-130s.

6. There would be a highly significant benefit accruing if the PACAF loss were limited to forty-two C-130s and the other sixteen retained on Okinawa to maintain High Gear alert and to perform other high priority projects. Reasons include:

- a.
- b. C-130s have crews familiar with and cleared for TAB 6 operations.
- c. Less degradation of remaining theater airlift requirements because of the additional C-119s in the system.
- d. Less time will be required to regain normal operational posture (approximately 14 days after return to home station).
- e. Fewer aircraft would be required to evenly periodic inspection.

7. The most significant problem attending this possible deployment, i.e. High Gear, could be eliminated if authority were reserved to deliver High Gear weapons to Japan bases (reference JFEP 44-116, JFM 5/19/62 Sec 62. GP-1).

1. Headquarters USAF has authorized the use of currently available funds to finance additive requirements associated with the Cuban situation. Weekly reporting procedures have been established to identify such requirements. Accurate record-keeping together with concise narrative explanations will be necessary to support such additive requirements. Implementing instructions have been sent to the subcommands.
2. The authority referred to above is not a "blank check." Additive requirements associated with the Cuban situation will be subject to careful review. Existing administrative and statutory limitations still apply. However, Headquarters USAF is to be notified immediately of any legal or administrative fund limitations, including "gold flow" restrictions, which might be encountered which could possibly jeopardize providing complete support for the current Cuban operation.
3. "Gold flow" restrictions should pose no problem in this connection, since the Department of Defense has exempted urgent purchases as aid of contingency plans set in motion as a result of the Cuban situation from "gold flow" approved requirements. Even with this exemption, the DOD guidance emphasized that "gold flow" policies would be followed to the extent practicable, and urgent purchases effected under the exemption must be thoroughly documented with clear justifications.
4. All staff agencies should keep this office currently advised of anticipated annual requirements related to this subject.
